

PATRICK NOTH

Patrick Noth is an Emmy-nominated comedian, writer, and director based in Los Angeles. With over 15 years of experience in digital content, television, and film, his original work has garnered hundreds of millions of views across multiple platforms.

After moving to New York as a teenager, he established himself as a freestyle rapper, composer, and music producer before launching into comedy at UCBNY, where he became a weekend performer and teacher. He went on to teach multiple classes and develop original curriculum at the Lee Strasberg Theatre and Film Institute in NYC.

As a multi-hyphenate creator, Noth has been hired to write and perform original content for major networks including Comedy Central, MTV, NBC, and Nickelodeon. Acting credits span Comedy Central, MTV, IFC, TV Land, NBC and more. His award-winning short film "Babysitting" received critical acclaim on the festival circuit, earning the Special Jury Award for Personal Vision at the prestigious Bend Film Festival.

A graduate of the City College of New York with a B.F.A in Music, Noth currently works as a writer, director, actor, and music producer. Most recently, Noth co-wrote and starred in "Micro Budget" (2024), a comedy that continues to receive enthusiastic reviews as it makes its way through the festival circuit.
